

DIMENSIONS OF CHILDHOOD GRIEF

by Allison Davis Maxon, LMFT

A grieving child may have:

- An apparent lack of feeling; numbing and avoidance
- Physiological changes; somatic symptoms
- Regressed behaviors
- Disorganization, panic and fear
- Explosive emotions; anger, bullying, rage, fear
- Acting-out behaviors; stuck in hyper-arousal
- Guilt and self-blame, based on egocentric/magical thinking
- Isolation, withdrawal, loneliness, emptiness

---

HELPING A GRIEVING CHILD

To help a grieving child, adults need to:

- Allow children to be the authors of their own grieving experience by:
  1. Listening carefully {listen with your heart}
  2. Accept and validate their feelings
  3. Acknowledge their pain, sadness, anger, and give them outlets for expression
- Have the emotional courage to go through grief with the child
- Use simple, direct language; encourage them to ask questions
- Remember that healing is a process, not a single event
- Watch for physical responses to grief {stomach aches, poor appetite, headaches, lethargic, agitation}

SEVEN CORE ISSUES IN ADOPTION & PERMANENCY

A Comprehensive Guide to Promoting Understanding and Healing in Adoption, Foster Care, Kinship Families and Third Party Reproduction

Loss begins the lifelong, intergenerational journey in adoption and permanency

*Jessica Kingsley Publishing, July 2019
Sharon Kaplan Roszia and Allison Davis Maxon*